CHOKEPOINT / ROUTE READ

The busiest route this week is Strait of Hormuz, where the most serious incident reached high. Red Sea comes next. The development driving the picture this week is the report that "Iran, Oman near deal on Strait of Hormuz".

This week, reporting pointed specifically to transit problems, diversions or advisory pressure - a closer view of what shippers actually faced.

Keep an eye on new naval advisories for Strait of Hormuz, any changes to war-risk insurance and what operators say about rerouting. These are the early warning signs of escalation; freight rates follow a few days later.

Threats to ships were reported recently, including attacks and seizures rather than just lower-level boardings or approaches. The table below highlights the most serious of these, focusing on attacks and seizures. The standout was "Indonesian Navy tightens maritime security after 1.3-ton drug seizure". Piracy and armed robbery were also reported over the same period, with "Acts of piracy: UAE slams Iran for attacking oil vessel in Strait of Hormuz" the clearest case.

Keep an eye on maritime advisories, naval statements and any change in war-risk or insurance costs on affected routes. These are the clearest early signs of whether attacks are picking up or easing.

MARITIME SECURITY (ICC CCS / IMB)

The ICC International Maritime Bureau recorded no piracy or armed-robbery activity for this scope in the current year. Maritime security is a standalone reference layer and is never added to incident totals.

No piracy or armed-robbery activity recorded for this period by the ICC CCS / IMB Piracy Reporting Centre.

COMMERCIAL IMPACT ON SHIPPING

No port, freight, insurance or commercial shipping disruption was reported this week. General market news - new ship orders, vessel sales, fleet finance, earnings, share-price moves - is deliberately left out of this section, so a quiet week here means real disruption was genuinely low rather than simply unreported.

Keep an eye on new port advisories, schedule delays at the major container and tanker hubs, and any insurance changes tied to specific routes. These are the next signs that commercial pressure is building.

No port, freight, insurance or commercial-shipping disruption records in the weekly window.

REGIONAL AND COUNTRY VIEW

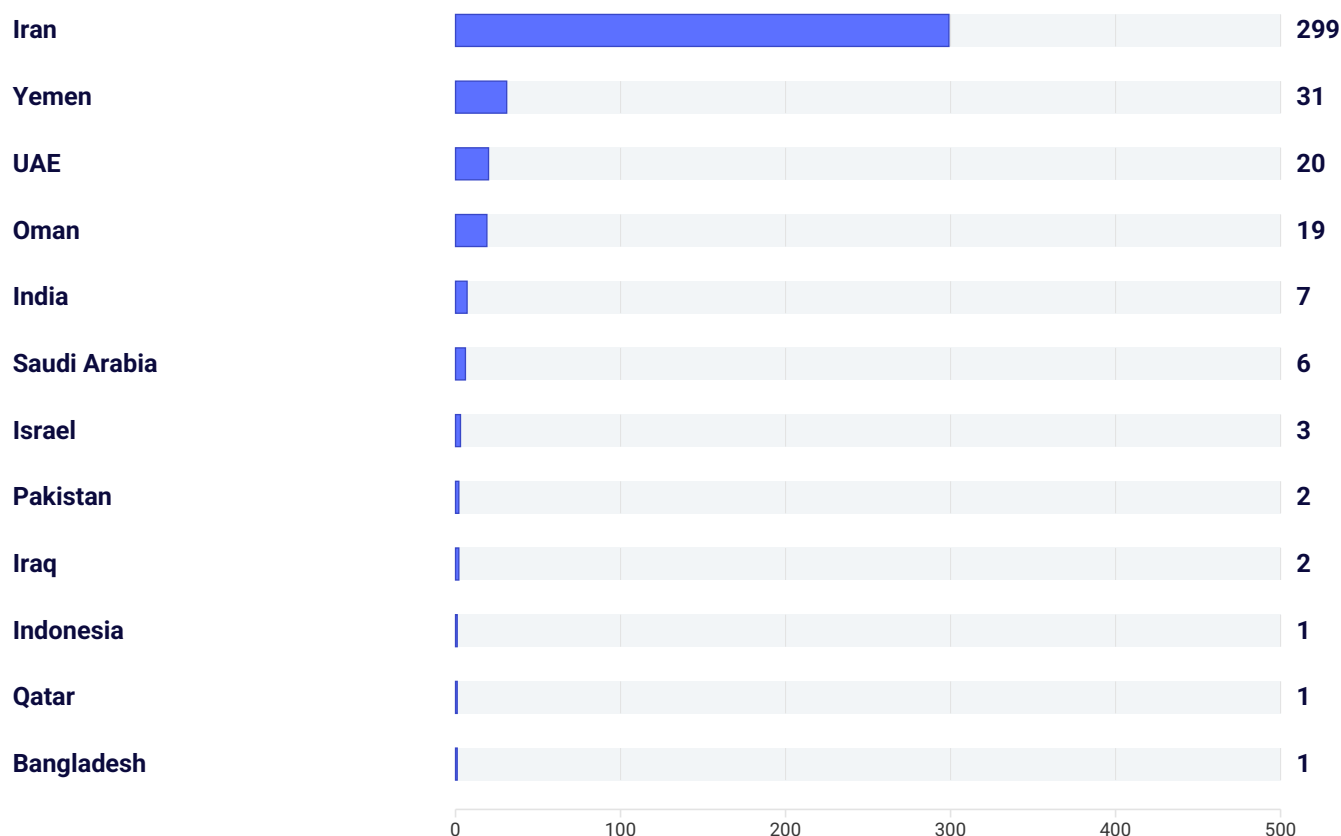

This week, Middle East saw the larger share of activity, ahead of APAC. By country, the most activity this week was in Iran, Yemen and UAE.

Some reports could not be tied to a specific country and are left off the country chart to keep it accurate.

WHAT MATTERS

The main business impact is on vessel movement through the Gulf chokepoint rather than on ports elsewhere. Missile attacks against tankers raise the risk of delayed sailings, convoying or rerouting decisions, higher war-risk costs and short-notice changes to passage plans. Any tightening of security procedures around Hormuz can also slow clearance, tug scheduling and onward feeder connections even without a formal closure. The Indonesian enforcement move may increase boarding, inspection and compliance friction in its waters, but it is not the main source of current supply-chain pressure in this window.

IMPLICATIONS FOR BUSINESS

- Revalidate Strait of Hormuz transit plans against current naval and flag-state security guidance.

WATCH NEXT

- Further reported missile or drone strikes on commercial vessels in the Strait of Hormuz Any formal navigation warnings, exclusion measures or transit restrictions near Oman Additional public attribution or retaliation...

POLESTAR VIEW

Risk level: Extreme for commercial shipping transiting the Strait of Hormuz; Low elsewhere in this window's reporting. Disruption is most likely on tanker movements tied to Gulf export routes, where security concerns can quickly convert into delayed passage, repricing and route review. Keep planning tightly focused on passage security, contractual exposure and contingency routing until the threat of further strikes eases.
